

Dear [REDACTED],

Two recent big developments prove that the tides are turning in the fight to stop climate change.

First, we launched our effort to limit carbon pollution here in Washington in May. Soon after, the EPA announced historic new rules that would push other states to follow our lead, ensuring that the nation's power plants cut carbon emissions by 30% from 2005 levels.

You and I know that these steps forward will have a huge impact -- but so does the opposition.

That's why we have to keep building momentum to show that we're not just ready to defend the ground we've gained -- we're ready to keep fighting until we win a clean energy future for Washington and for all.

You can help show the opposition that you're fully committed to that fight.

Already, our opponents are attempting to use efforts to stop climate change -- like ours -- as a wedge to divide the public. They're trying to scare voters into maintaining the status quo.

Climate-denying billionaires -- like the carbon-loving Koch brothers -- have already spent millions in elections across the country to elect politicians who protect the big-time polluters. They know that if we enact strict rules to limit carbon pollution here in Washington, we'll set an example for the entire country to follow.

We need to show that we're not backing down. We need to show that people like you are willing to unite and meet the opposition dollar-for-dollar -- even if we have to do it with just a few dollars at a time.

If you show your commitment with a contribution before Monday's deadline, we'll ensure Washington can continue to lead in the fight to stop climate change.

Thanks for your commitment to helping me build a clean energy future for Washington.

Very truly yours,

Jay Inslee
