

Dear Supporter,

There's no way around it. My Democratic colleagues and I have a very long to-do list for the next legislative session, and there's not a lot of time to get it all done.

When things get tough -- and they will -- I need to know who I can count on to tell their legislators to work with me on the big issues.

I want to know what issue is most important to you, so that when critical legislation is at stake, I'll know that I can rely on you to have my back.

In just over a month, we won't just see the beginning of a new legislative session. We'll be getting acquainted with a lot of new legislators on both sides of the aisle. That means we have to be ready to show them where you and other Washingtonians stand -- right away -- so we can begin the process of finding common ground and solve the problems we face together.

There's a lot we have to accomplish. This is the year we must fund our schools, take action against carbon pollution, and fix our roads and bridges. It's going to be tough, and we'll have to fight for every inch of progress.

But if you let me know which issue is most important to you and your friends and neighbors do the same, together we can make sure that every victory counts. The only reason we won a historic victory for gun safety on election night is that people like you made it a priority, made a plan, and got organized.

Time is running out before legislators start debating the first bills on the docket, and we have to be ready to take action before that happens. Thanks for letting me know where you stand.

Very truly yours,

Jay Inslee
